Market and Portfolio Commentary

After a strong Q1, April was much more mixed with losses across a number of asset classes. After 5 months of consecutive gains, the S&P500 reported negative returns for the month. A combination of renewed geopolitical tensions in the middle east and sticky inflation led to volatility across a number of asset classes. Inflation in Europe is coming down faster than in the US which gave the ECB some confidence to point towards a first cut in June. We're also starting to see some green shoots in terms of economic recovery in Europe with PMI's improving and Euro area GDP coming out at +0.3%.

European Sub Investment Grade Highlights^{a,b}

New issuances activity continued to be strong in April. New loan issuances totaled €11.7bn, up sequentially from March 2024 level of €7bn and significantly above April 2023 level of €5.6bn. HY issuances remained healthy reaching €6.95bn in April 2024, compared to €10bn in March 2024 and €4.7bn in April 2023. Primary activity in April 2024 came from a slew of mainly refinancing and extension requests in what remains a muted market for new-money supply. We also started seeing some early successful repricing moves, which could lead to a revival in repricing activity in coming months. The demand for loans in Europe continued to be strong fueled by ramping CLOs, albeit we note some polarization in terms of performance with strong appetite for higher quality names/higher spread names rallying strongly into April. The average spread for Term Loan Bs stood at +436bps and yield to maturity at 8.8%. From talking to investment bankers and PE professionals, we would expect M&A volumes to pick up in the near future. We are starting to see the first green shoots in terms of issuance and have been told that this trend will continue to pick up over the next few months. This should lead to a healthy supply of new issuance and continued growth of our market, and hence more investment opportunities.

The Credit Suisse Western European Leveraged Loan Index return, hedged to Euro, was +0.78% in April 2024 (YTD +2.84%), a sequential improvement m-o-m supported by strong demand for loans and more muted negative impact of idiosyncratic shocks observed in March. Defensives were +0.6% (YTD +2.26%) and cyclicals +0.96% (+3.43%) in April. BBs returned +0.84% (YTD +2.16%), while single Bs return was +0.83% (+2.95%) and CCCs +0.82% (+9.73%). As at the end of April, the 3-year discount margin on the index was 490bps. The Credit Suisse Western European High Yield Index return, hedged to Euro, was -0.1% in April 2024 (YTD +0.96%).

Portfolio Commentary

In performing credit, we selectively participated in the new issue market where we still find attractively priced paper. However, on the back of the rally we have seen in the last few months, we are becoming increasingly selective and focus a lot on downside protection from documentation. We have seen some slippage in document terms in the last few weeks and months, and we would rather avoid investing in these loans as downside protection remains our core focus.

In the credit opportunities sleeve, we had some cash coming into the fund through dividend payments from restructured equity positions. We got a dividend from an alloy manufacturer and from a transport company. We also got some repayments of restructured loans and we re-invested these proceeds in other opportunities. One opportunity presented itself unexpectedly. This was a position we had in a chemicals company in the performing credit sleeve where we were expecting a refinancing. After months of negotiations with the owners about equity injections, the owners decided to walk away from the business and hand the business to lenders. The loans sold off on the back of this which resulted in a near term P&L hit. However, we managed to increase our exposure during this sell-off and have the view that we should get a par recovery in the near term. We also exited our second lien position in another chemicals company at close to par. The business has been underperforming for a few quarters now and we believe there could be a better re-entry point in this position at a lower price in the medium term. We also added some structured finance positions to the fund as this market continues to offer attractive risk-adjusted yields. Finally we added a subordinated piece of debt with an attractive coupon of E+10.25% in a healthcare name and bought some high yield bonds in the high 80s in a business which is looking to IPO which could provide a catalyst for a re-rating of these bonds

Across the entire portfolio, as of April month end, the weighted average market price was 91.4, trading at a yield to maturity ("YTM") of 12.9% (€ hedged) / 14.2% (£ hedged) and delivering a 12.1% (€ hedged) / 13.3% (£ hedged) running cash yield. This compares to a weighted average price of 90.4 and YTM of 14.1% (€ hedged) / 15.4% (£ hedged) as of December 2023. Floating rate instruments comprised 82.5% of the portfolio while 80.7% was invested in senior secured assets. The portfolio had a cash position of -0.2% (including leverage) at the end of the month.
